Description

In this seminar we will talk about the linguistic ideologies of young people, focusing mainly on young speakers of minority languages.. For those young people who live their daily lives in multicultural contexts, what social significance and function do languages such as Basque, Catalan or Galician have? what place do these languages occupy in their daily cultural activities, in their local world and in virtual interaction? What influence do new transnational ideological and cultural currents have on their linguistic choices? and on the vision they have about their languages?

The seminar will focus on studies on Basque youth and Basque language, but will also feature the participation of internationally renowned researchers who will expand the debate to the case of Catalan, Irish and Galician.

Objectives

At the seminar we would like to create a space for reflection and debate. Our intention is to make a shared reflection on the state of the matter and also on the future lines of research in the field of youth linguistic ideologies. At the same time, we are convinced that it can also be a source of ideas for new language policies aimed at young people. Therefore, among the guests and participants will also be members of organizations related to language planning.

The seminar also aims to give young people a voice to participate in the panel discussions. To this end, a round table consisting only of young people and led by young researchers involved in action research activities will be held.
