Description

Children, young people and, in general, athletes of all ages, have the right to practice sport in safe and protective environments, free from abuse; and sports organizations have an enormous responsibility to ensure that the practice of sport is developed prioritizing the welfare of athletes, above any other purpose. More and more clubs are incorporating safeguarding and protection policies throughout its structure and activity, however, there is a great diversity regarding the development of prevention measures adopted. This activity aims to address this issue from an international perspective, sharing knowledge and experiences among sports entities at different levels.

Objectives

Raise awareness of the importance of implementing specific measures in sport for the protection of children, adolescents and adults at risk.

To facilitate strategies for the development of a safeguarding and protection policy in clubs and federations.

Share experiences of safeguarding and protection in local, territorial, national and international sport entities.

Dion Raitt

Physical Education Teacher. Working alongside The FA Safeguarding Team to support and advise from a survivor's unique perspective from strategy to implementation of various campaigns and initiatives to improve safeguarding in football at all levels of participation. As a 'survivor' of abuse in professional football I understand fully the challenges that face any survivor, I am living proof that our past does not define us as human beings and we can still achieve whatever we want through resilience and belief. I fight my own daily battles with my mental health as a result of my abuse and can proudly say that being the winner which I am I come out as champion most days.

Chris Thurston
