Description

Within the framework of the European Green Deal and the Digital Strategy 2030, the European Union is promoting a dual ecological and digital transition aimed at transforming economic sectors based on sustainability, social justice, and technological innovation. This transformation, known as a just and digital transition, not only affects public regulation but also has an increasing impact on private law, particularly in areas such as contracting, civil liability, and consumer rights.

The course seeks to show whether and to what extent private law can influence and/or needs to adapt to new social and economic developments in an increasingly digital world.

Objectives

Promote innovative research by young scholars.

Disseminating research in innovative fields.

Establish a mentoring relationship between young researchers and senior researchers.

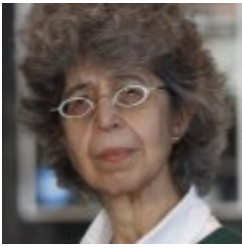

Consolidate scientific research networks on key issues for the advancement of Private Law.

Award a prize for the most original research by the Spanish Association of Comparative Law.

Course specific contributors
