Description

Excitations play a crucial role in determining fundamental electronic and optical properties of a crystal, and can even give rise to states of matter without any equilibrium counterparts. At the single-layer limit, quantum confinement and enhanced interaction effects lead to exotic many-body phenomena. For example, single-layer semiconductors host tightly bound excitons with large binding energies that remain stable even at room temperature. In bilayer and few-layer stacks, the relative twist angle between layers introduces an additional degree of tunability, enabling the exploration of new emergent phenomena. These include strongly correlated electronic states, adjustable band gaps, unique optical and magnetic properties, and correlated topological phases such as spin Hall and fractional quantum Hall effects.

ORGANIZING COMMITTEE:

- Maia G. Vergniory (DIPC, Max Planck)
- Reyes Calvo (BC Materials)
- Santiago Blanco-Canosa (DIPC, Ikerbasque)
- Adolfo Grushin (Institut NEEL - CNRS)
- Alexander Altland (University of Cologne)
- Julen Ibañez Azpiroz (CFM, Ikerbasque)

Objectifs

The summer school aims to offer a comprehensive introduction to these cutting-edge topics and situate them within the broader framework of emergent phenomena in condensed matter physics.
